Review

This stimulating book challenges the oncology professional's viewpoint on the real meaning behind the provision of culturally competent healthcare. The goals of this book... are threefold: 1-to examine the metaphors of cancer that teach us about our differences; 2- to delineate metaphors that naturalize inequalities; and 3-to contribute to the alleviation of suffering associated with cancer while exposing those perspectives that seek to homogenize diversity. The contributing authors in Confronting Cancer engage the professional to examine the anthropology of cancer and the application of concepts such as cultural competence, health disparities, and the complexity of diversity within cultural groups. --NancyJo Bush, Oncology Nursing Forum, vol. 37, no. 2, March 2010

Confronting Cancer offers a highly engaging examination of the anthropology of cancer.... Authored by many of the leading figures in the field, this edited volume moves beyond examination to action, documenting the application of anthropological approaches and insights in the alleviation of suffering among people living with cancer. Thus [the book] exhibits the best of anthropology in its confrontation with the worst of human conditions --Merrill Singer, University of Connecticut

The contributors in Confronting Cancer...ask us to re-examine our stale assumptions and misuse of such concepts as culture, health disparities, and multiculturalism. The book is both timely and relevant for students, researchers, and practitioners who want to help those who feel powerless or misunderstood when confronted by cancer. --Jennie Joe, University of Arizona

CONFRONTING CANCER: METAPHORS, ADVOCACY, AND ANTHROPOLOGY (SCHOOL FOR ADVANCED RESEARCH ADVANCED SEMINAR SERIES) FROM BRAND: SCHOOL FOR A PDF

The World Health Organization (WHO) reported more than 7 million deaths from cancer? 2.5 percent of all deaths?in 2005. Each year there are approximately 11 million new cases, and WHO expects that the number will double by 2020. Although the disease is not uncommon in rich nations, 70 percent of cancer deaths occur in low- and middle-income regions and countries. The growing frequency of the disease reinforces its significance as a metaphor for lack of control and degeneration and as a signifier of difference, something that is part of one's body and world and yet completely unacceptable. In this book, anthropologists examine the lived experiences of individuals confronting cancer and reveal the social context in which prevention and treatment may succeed or fail.
